Solan de Cabras sparkling 1500

Solan de Cabras still 1500

Sourced from a single spring in the province of Cuenca. The beneficial properties of Solán de Cabras water were officially documented in 1787, and its composition has remained unchanged ever since. The water's natural journey takes 400 years: rainwater slowly filters through the soil and its layers, reaches the aquifer and eventually returns to the surface. A distinctive feature of this water is its constant temperature, which never falls below 21°C.

Saint Geron sparkling 2000

Saint Geron still 2000

Saint-Géron is a unique naturally carbonated mineral water sourced from a spring in Haute-Loire, rising to the surface from deep within the Earth. Geological changes over time have shaped its distinctive character and purity. Thanks to its delicate bubbles and balanced mineral composition, including bicarbonates that support digestion, magnesium, and more than 20 minerals such as lithium, traditionally associated with longevity, Saint-Géron is an exceptional accompaniment to any special meal. Most notably, it contains no nitrates.

Saint-Géron water was first mentioned by Julius Caesar in Commentaries on the Gallic War, but its true fame came in the 16th century. From the 19th century onward, it received numerous medals at World's Fairs, bringing it international recognition that continued into the early 20th century. Since the 2000s, Saint-Géron has experienced a renaissance.

With its refined effervescence, Saint-Géron combines a delicate sensation on the palate with a neutral taste, perfectly complementing and enhancing the flavours of food and wine. Saint-Géron pairs beautifully with every cuisine.
